ROYAL VISIT TO THE THEATRE.

COVENT-GARDEN, Wednesday, Nov. 18. Since the day when their Majesties first visited the Drama after the Coronation, so numerous an affembly, we believe, have not reforted to a Theatre—Every door was attacked by a force that would have carried Belgraded And the overflow could have demolithed the Balkile, in the duration of a two act molithed the Baltle, in the duration of a two act piece.

Ladies of every description, suffered in the tumult that attended the opening of the doors:—caps, shoes, perticoats, aprons, handkerchiefs,—all were carried away in the wreck; and beauties were visible, that had nothing to do with the promise of the play-bill.

His Majelly on his entry was received with the shoudest acclamations we ever heard within a theatre:—the Queen experienced tellimonies of regard not much inserior:—and the Princesses were welcomed by similar proofs of affection.

As soon as the King appeared, the band played "God save Great Georges" see: and on the stage being filled by the vocal performers, every person in the pat and galleries united in a chorus.

Mr Reynolds's comedy of the Dramatift, was played in a very capital stille:—We never saw more excellent acting than Lewis exhibited. The Royal atention was riverted all through to the scene. The part allotted to adirs brunten, though trifling for her powers, was yet favourable to the display of some very beautiful illustrations, much to the practe of her

To the conclusion of the comedy four appoint ver-fes were thus full joined:

"Ay, Floriville! if you would behold pure ma-fullied love, never travel out of this country. De-fullied love, never travel out of this country.—Depend on't;"

"No foreign clime such high examples prove,
"Of wedded pleasure—or commobil tows:
"Long in the life have joys domestic grown,
"Nars'd in the cottage—cherish'd on the Throne."

His Majerty was dressed in brown and gold; the Queen was in pale pink and filver. The Princesse wore boughets and feathers; and more than the usual portion of diamonds in their stead-dresses. The Princese Royal appeared like a Divinity. The august party retired, when the currain rell—about eleven.

Diamonds!—

Poor Mits Jessines, whose loss of a brilliant pin, about three winters back, excised unusual care in the ladies of the Court, experinced, Wednesday night, a like depredation: Previous to her entrance in the Theatre, the put her diamond ear-rings in her pocket for security, and intended to restore them to their proper situation when the audience were a little composed. Her cautionsproved inessectual, for upon seeling for them, she discovered they were gone, and her partie, containing two or three guineas, with them.

These ornamental jewels are estimated at the value of sive hundred guineas!—a ferious loss indeed, and too heavy to be endured by any, save those in the connection of Oriental plunderets.

Is is, however, some qualification, that as Mits Jessies was at the Theatre in duty to the Court, her Majesty may possibly supply the loss, from the Royal casket. We shall with pleasure record such generosity, whenever we are enabled.

Mits Jessies took her departure from the Theatre in great apitation, as soon as she perceived the loss.

The person upon whom the suspicion fell, was feated near her, he was in consequence taken before Sir Sampson Wright, and scarched; but not property was found. Upon examining his lodgings in Shoe-lane, nothing appeared to establish the suspicion—the apartaments being in all respects empty—He was discharaged for want of evidence.

A coachman and a guard were produced, who politively (wore that three notices were given to the pattengers that the coach was ready to depart.

This, the witnesses for the plaintiff, on being examined, positively denied.
Lord Kenyon thought the conduct of the coachman most impudent, and reprobated the conduct of the defendants for attempting to milead the Jury, by bolitering up a defence, founded in failthood. His Lordship recommended examplary damages, and the Jury gave fifty pounds.

Consumerion or Breas in Paris.

During the month of September laft, 50,716 facks of flour entered into the city of Paris, and 63,001 in the courfe of October; dividing this provision of flour by days, it amounts to at least 2000 per day. Now, it is well known, from the regular accounts kept in that department of the police, that for many preceding years the confunction of Paris amounted only from 1080 to 1500 facks. Here telults an excess of 300 facks per day:—What is become of them? Which is the most credible supposition, that the specificat population of Paris should be increased, awing to the concourfe of people from the provinces, on this critical fituation of the kingdom, one third; or, that this unnatural confumption should be the fruit of some dark, but extensive manageuries? dark, but extensive manœuvres?

THE NETHERLANDS.

This morning, at eight o'clock, the patriotic army, confifting of 6000 men, came from St Nicholas, through the country of Waes, in order to furprife our town. The alarm-bell was immediately rung from the great tower of Belford. The Imperial gar-rifoh, conditing of about 1000 men, instantly came forward, and posted themselves in the principal streets. They were furiously attacked by the pa-triots with fire-arms and artillery. Our Capuchins joined them, and one Carmelite was seen on horse-back, exhorting the sons of Liberty to sight zeasously for the good cause.

A general massacre has taken place; the alarm-bell rings yet, and this moment, it is said, the Imperial troops are surrendering to the patriots, who are now plundering the houses of Mr Matroux, the Advocate Peilinex, Mr de Hoop, M. Marplot, and many others who were friends to the Austrians.

We lately flattered ourselves with the hopes, that our Representatives to his Prushan Majesty, and to our Representatives to his Prussan Majesty, and to the Chamber of Wetzlar, would be favourably received; but the following letter from our Prince Bishop has thrown us a-new into a state of alarm.

LETTER FROM THE PRINCE BISHOP OF Liege. " Treves, Nov. 7.

" GENTLEMEN,
" I cannon conceal my discontent, at the receipt Three weeks the courie of sellerday brought my letter of the 75th of October, in feeking to black-en my actions, and calumniate my conduct. How could the author of that voluminous letter adopt fuch means with a people, who ought to be intimately convinced of the fallity of the arguments which run through it.

"I refrain from faying more; nor will I recount the excelles which have been the confequence of the Revolution. The Sacred Imperial Chamber, the three most screne Prince Directors of the Circle; in fine, the whole empire, offended by a fedition, as unjustifiable as incompatible with the rules of justice, of good order, and subordination, have thought it not proper to tolerate attempts of this nature. A military force into the country, which is now become necessary for the re-establishment of the ancient order.

"My heart is femilibly affected at feeing a great part of my subjects suffering under the consequences of this Revolution. Let them repair, as soon as posbible, these outrages, by a full obedience; and they ought to be perfuaded, that I shall always interest myself, in the most lively manner, in every thing that can contribute to the happiness of my good and faithful subjects. They ought not to doubt of my principles in this respect; a zeal and love of order, and of the public good, will direct at all times my actions

"I will conclude by faving, that I have many motives, and prefling reasons, for perfitting in my refusal to fanction the points which you have presented to me.

"I am, with confideration, Gentlemen,
"Your devoted and affectionate Your devoted and affectionate.

" THE BISHOP AND PRINCE

BRUSSELS, Nov. 13.

The utmost vigilance of despotum has been exerted since the success of the patriotic army in Flanders, to cut off all intercourse between Ghent and ders, to cut off all intercourse between Ghent and this city.

Darhberg's rout was complete, and the retreat of his troops the most precipitate and disorderly. The pursuit was more bloody than the action. The passage of the Scheldt was covered by the regiment of Benders, the most trusty and savage of the German mercenavies. They sustained the shock of the pursuing victors with ferocious bravery, and displayed a resolution worthy of more virtuous motives, and of a better cause. It was in this period of the retreat that the Prince of Anhalt Deslau (of the same family with the Empress of Russia) tell. In the sate of this Prince, who had so recently stained himself with civil blood, by commanding the unarmed Burgher of Malines to by commanding the unarmed Burgher of Malines to be butchered, a mind not very prone to superstition might be disposed to recognize a retributive and avenging hand.

The loss of the Austrian army in the conflict, and during the retreat, is confessed, even by the partizans during the retreat, is confelled, even by the partizans of Imperial tyranny, to have exceeded rooc killed. On the night that followed, that portion of Planders and Brabant, through which they paffed, was subjected to every our age and excets that might be expected from a licentious foldiery, unreftrained by humanity, and maddening with mortification and despair. Villingan, a village not far from Aloft, expi pair. Villinger, a village not far from Aloft, expi-ated, by a general conflagration, and an indifferim-nate maffacre, the zeal which conducted fome of its inhabitants to the patriotic flandard. The Cure, al inoffensive old man, obnoxious only because he want a minister of religion, took refuge at the altar; but he was dragged from his fanctuary, and the Comer-manding Officer of the detachment, animated by the spirit, though not, perhaps, authorised by the inte-itructions of Dalton, ordered him to be led to instant

These troops, with several others from Flanders and Hainault, are drawing together to form a Cordon in the centre of Brabant, deftined to protect this capital, which will doubtlefs be the first object of the enterprizes of the Patriotic army.

The Duke of Saxe Teichen had, with his confort, avowed their intention of quitting this feene of blood fled and horror; but they remain at Bruffels, and have betrayed the strongest repugnance at the present violent measures of the Government.

The rigours of the Ministry have encreased with their fears: To have received in miscellaneous or commercial correspondence, the slightest article of intelligence, which has the misfortune to be true, is become a crime against the State. Forty-two prisoners, among whom were the Secretary, the Preceptor of the children of the Duke d'Urfel, and Vivier, the Secretary of the Cardinal of Malines, were yesterday efcurted by a strong guard to the citadel of Antwerp,

A letter was read from the city of Craon in Anjon A letter was read from the city of Craon in Anjoe, fetting forth the fcarcity of provisions felt there, and praying leave to apply the sums deslined for the repairs of roads, and other public works for the year 1789, to the relief of the poor of Canton.

The letter was referred to the Committee of Figure 2.

An information was read from the permanent Committee of Narbonne, prefenting the declaration of the Noblesse of Toulouse, as an offence against the authority of the National Assembly.

A fimilar information was prefented from the chap-lains of the cathedral of Dax, against a declaration of the Clergy of that city, assembled by order of the

The debate on the new division of the kingdom was refuned; and, after M. Thouret had replied to M.
de Mirabeau, the question,

"Shall there be a new division of the kingdom?"
was put and carried by a great majority.

"Shall the new grand division of the kingdom

M. Bailey, the Mayor of Paris, was introduced at the head of a deputation from the community : the purport of which was, to delire that the fame powers with refpect to affeling and levying taxes, as formerly exercised by the Prevot de Marchands and Lieutenant of Police, might be granted to the Mayor md his Deputy, till a permanent regulation can be

The Chamber agreet to register this order, and defires the President to write to the Keep-er of the Seals, to assure his Majesty, that the Mem-hers of it meant only to lay before him their sent-ments on the evils that afflict the country, and their inviolable attachment to his person; that the annulled arret, intended only for his Majesty's perusal, had never been published by them, in any shape; and that the Chamber neither could, nor ought to be suspected. the Chamber neither could, nor ought to be suspected of exciting tumults, or raifing doubts either of the principles entertained by his Majerty, or his intimate union with the National Affembly.

THURSDAY,—November 12.

The election of a new Prefident was finally determined. The votes were, for M. Thouret, 342; for the Bishop of Aix, 294.

Remonstrances were read from several cities and communities of Dauphiny, against the convocation of the States of the Province; and also an information from the city of Bourdeaux against the declaration of the Noblesse of Toulouse.

A petition was read from the Dominican Monks of the city of Caen, fetting forth that the petitioners, convinced that St Dominick, and all other founders of monaftic establishments, erred against reason, when of monaltic establishments, erred against reason, when they invited men to work out their eternal salvation in the dirt of a cloilter: intreating the Affembly to grant them that liberty from which they were precluded by uniuft, barbarous and impious laws; and offering, in unjult, barbarous and implous laws; and offering, in confideration of fo great a blefting, to refign all the property of their monaftery to the nation.

A novice of Ferre, near Nevers, appeared to be possessed of very different sentiments: This poor girl, undoubtedly ignorant that the character of a mother of a family was far superior to that of a solitary Nun, petitioned the Assembly that she might be permitted to take the vows, notwithstanding the prohibitory decree iffued by them.

The farther confideration of the division of the kingdom was refumed; and it was decreed,

"That a municipality shall be established in every city, burgh, parift, and community of the country. every grand divition of the kingdom be divided into three, fix, nine, or twelve diffries, according to the convenience and local interests of each, to be aftertained from the reports of their refpective deputies,'

You know that the letters patent for that Parliament have been registered purely and simply. You have seen that the arret of the Chamber was not meant to be published. These reasons induce me to think it convenient for the National Affembly not to prefs their own decree any farther. I am of opinion, that moderation and indulgence are better adapted to the circumstance of the case; and I do not helitate to tell you that this is my particular wish.

This letter occasioned a warm and disorderly de-bate, which lasted more than two hours; and, after all, the following decree was rather hastily, than confiderately voted :1

"After reading the King's letter, relative to the Chamber of Vacation of the Parliament of Rouen, the National Affembly, eager to give his Majesty a fresh proof of attachment, has decreed that the wish expreffed by the King was the wish of the Affenbly; and that the President shall wait on his Majesty to present this decree."

Monday,—November 16.
On the 14th, M. Necker entered the Affembly, a-midst the applauses of its Members and spectators.— He read a memorial, in which were fet forth, the la-mentable flate of the kingdom—the loffes which commerce daily fultains—and the almost total disappearance of specie—that, in spite of the sacrifices which have been already made, the State, nevertheless, stands in need of a further subscription of ninety millions, beyond the ordinary revenues, for the fervice of the next year, befides eighty millions more for the acquittal of the debt due to the Caiffe d'Ecompte, for the want of which the latter is so much distressed, as to make it apprehended it must fail in its engage-

If we may credit the Austrian spies, there is now added in the Ottoman empire to foreign humiliation, the horrors of domestic convulsion. The Seraskier Abdy Pacha is said to be recalled with his army from Seras, for the protection of the Sovereign and the empiral. The most horrible disorder reigned in Confinantople. The populace of that city (even there there are mobs) inslamed to madness by the defeat of Rimnick, and the subsequent capture of Belgrade, had even menaced the Throne, and the life of the Sultan. An express had been sent to all the Turkish Generals, requiring their presence to protect the Soterign. The army of the Grand Vizier has, it is fid, already passed the Danube, in obedience to the orders of the Porte.

The report of Belgrade being re-taken, is totally without soundation. The Turks have no army near is, and the garrison of Austrians is composed of the order of Laudohn's troops. The expence of blood and treasure to take this sortress is amazing, when we consider that it never can be long kept—Perhaps the best way would be to raze it to the ground.

5. "Shall these sub-divisions be made by a ternary ratio, that is to say, 3, 6, 9, &c.?"

This division was adopted, as the most applicable to the greatest number of symmetrical divisions.

6. "Must there necessarily be nine Districts under each department, according to the plan proposed by the Committee?"

This was negatived; but that a choice should be made between the numbers 3, 6, and 9, according to the locality, population, &c.

From letters, dated Leghorn, of the 4th of October, the following melancholy news is extracted—
Two young gentlemen of the Leander, a Mr—

Street-robberies, attended with circumstances of peculiar cruelty, being now so common and alarming, it may not be improper to mention, that the same was remarkably the case in 1753, when Henry Fielding, Esq; (the celebrated author) presided at Bow Street. In one week, he had to examine perfons for no less than sive murders committed in the streets. He was consulted by the Duke of Newcastle, then minister, and submitted a plan to his Grace, which was adopted. Six bundred pounds were given to Mr Fielding, by which he bribed some of the gangs, to betray the whole late the hands of

In configuence of the mandate from the Chamber of Wetzaer, the Prudian troops, those of the Palatinate of the Rhine, and those of the Bishopric of Munfter, are making dispositions to enter immediately into the country of Liege, to maintain order there, and support the negociations of the Ministers of the Circle, viz. From the Cultombage books it appears, that no lefs than as is bugileads of Tobateo have been exported from flore Glajgow to Culent alone, from the Loth of October and during the course of that mouth. This confirms the remark we some time ago made, when so many lamps were broke in this city, that an extensive manufactory of Tobateo had been set up at Ostend, which Tobateo afterwards found its way into it is country in a manufactored state. The late Tobateo bill, indeed, has put so many retraints upon the manufacturing of that commodity in Britain, that sorieigness, assisted by the natives of this country, have entered very largely into the business, and smuggling, or course, has become more prevalent than ever, to the great detriment of the revenue as well as to the fair trader. Tobateo, by the late bill, can be exported in any guantivy, to foreign parts, wishou, paying any duty whatever; nor are the importers of a into this country obliged to lodge it in the King's cellar under bond, as sometry. The inducement of feed it abroad to be manufactured, and afterwards to rud the risk of smuggling it into this country, must appear less evidents, when it is considered, that every hogshead of Tobaceo, upon an average, pays a duty of 75 l. Sterling to Government when kept in this country for the purpose of being manufactured, while what is sent to foreign countries pays no duty. If therefore, it is sent to foreign among the same time, to escourage the manufactures of our country in preference to those of foreign nations, the famous Tobaceo, bill will yet need to undergo very material alorations.

The fhip has come off with trifling damage, in respect to what might have been expected, only a butt's end or two at the keel seemed started; while on the fand it was the opinion of the most experienced people there, that the vessel would have been rendered unserviceable before she was got off. An Adjudication for furns amounting to 1591. 14s. 9d. befides interest affecting an acre of land at Rigmuir, and houses thereon, lying in the parish of Gratney, which is to be exposed at 12 years purchase of the free rent of the subjects affected by the adjudication, being L. 28 to O. The subjects in lot ferond hold of the Crown, excepting a very small part of the superiorities. The lands held of the Crown afford a freehold qualification. The lands, &c. in lots first, third, and fourth, hold of subjects superior. There is a good modern mansion-house, with offices, pigeon-house, garden, &c. on lot first; and upon that lot, as well as lot second, there is a good deal of thriving planning, upon which no value is put. The rent of lot first has risen considerably fince the proof was taken in the judicial sale, and conform to which proof the upset price is fixed; and there is reason to believe that, upon permanent leases, a considerable rise of rent would still be go for these and the other subjects under sale. About 21 is of the rent of Kirkletown and Pockeskinestoot remains of tiend, after paying the stipend, the privilege of purmains of tiend, after paying the flipend, the privilege of purchafing which is to be exposed at five years purchase. The tiends in this parith are faleable at fix years purchase; to that 171 of the rent is in reality exposed at only cleven years, pur-
